5. Assessment of Appropriateness

5.1. In providing the Service of Reception and Transmission and Execution of Client Orders, the Company is obliged under Applicable Regulations and the Product Governance, to seek information from a Client or potential Client regarding his knowledge and experience in the investment field relevant to the specific type of Service or Financial Instrument offered or demanded, so as to enable the Company to assess whether the Service or Financial Instrument is appropriate for the Client or potential Client. Where the Client or potential Client elects not to provide the information regarding his knowledge and experience, or where he provides insufficient information regarding his knowledge and experience, the Company will not be able to determine whether the Service or Financial Instrument is appropriate for him. The Company shall assume that information about his knowledge and experience provided from the Client or potential Client to the Company, is accurate and complete and the Company shall have no responsibility to the Client or potential Client if such information is incomplete and/or misleading and/or changes and/or becomes inaccurate and the Company will be deemed to have performed its obligations under Applicable Regulations, unless the Client or potential Client has informed the Company of such changes.

The Company shall specify the type(s) of client for whose needs, characteristics and objectives the financial instrument is compatible prior to presenting such financial instruments to the client. The potential target market of each financial instrument it manufactures shall be specified at a sufficient granular level to the best efforts of the Company to be consistent with its Product Governance Policy and the current legal framework. The level of granularity of the target market shall be proportionate to the nature of the financial instrument and distribution strategy as per the Product Governance Policy.

When the Company acts as manufacturer only, given the absence of specific client information, target market assessment shall be rather abstract and shall be based, inter alia, on the Company's theoretical knowledge of and past experience with the product.

The identification of the target market shall be based on an assessment of end clients for whose needs and objectives the product is intended, taking into account the nature of the product. In particular, the Company shall:

- a) assess whether the risk/ reward profile of the financial instrument is consistent with the target market and whether the financial instrument design is driven by features that benefit the client and not by a business model that relies on poor client outcomes to be profitable;
- b) consider the charging structure proposed for the financial instrument and examine the following:
 - whether the financial instrument's costs and charges are compatible with the needs, objectives and characteristics of the target market;

- whether the charges undermine the financial instrument's return expectations, such as where the costs or charges equal, exceed or remove almost all the expected tax advantages linked to a financial instrument; and
- whether the charging structure of the financial instrument is appropriately transparent for the target market, such as that it does not disguise charges or is too complex to understand.

When identifying the target market for a financial instrument, the Company shall use the following list of five categories:

- c) client type: "retail client", "professional client".
- d) knowledge and experience: knowledge and experience about elements such as the product type, product features and/ or knowledge/ experience in thematically related areas to help the client understand the product; knowledge and experience may be dependent on each other in some cases.
- e) financial situation with a focus on the ability to bear losses: the percentage of losses target clients are able and willing to afford must be specified; the Company should also specify if there are any additional payment obligations that might exceed the invested amount (e.g. margin calls).
- f) risk tolerance and compatibility of the risk/ reward profile of the product with the target market: the general attitude that target clients should have in relation to the risks of investment must be specified and described (e.g. "risk-oriented or speculative", "balanced", "conservative").
- g) clients' objectives and needs: the wider financial goals of target clients or the overall strategy they follow when investing must also be specified (e.g. the expected investment horizon - number of years the investment is to be held); the clients' objectives and needs may vary from specific to more generic.

For more complicated products, such as CFDs, the target market shall be identified with more detail, while for simpler, more common products, the target market could be identified with less detail.

h) Negative Target Market

For each financial instrument it manufactures, the Company shall also identify a negative target market, i.e. any group(s) of clients for whom the product is incompatible, by using the same five categories as stated above. To the best efforts of the Company to be compliant with the legal framework and the Product Governance policy it will proceed to offer financial instruments that are suitable to your needs as a client based on the information provided to us during the on-boarding stage and from time to time as per the policies of the Company for maintenance and supervision of the account. Should such information not be disclosed in full or accurately, the Company does not take any responsibility if such a financial instrument was presented to you and/or offered in error and outside your comfort level as an investor. We may only offer financial instruments to investors according to the investment profile and appropriateness scoring provided to us according to the legal framework and our Product Governance and other on-boarding policies. Should you have any question or doubt as to whether a financial instrument is appropriate or not for your investment purposes according to the aforementioned, please contact the company prior to making any investment decision.

When acting as a manufacturer only, where the Company does not have a direct relationship with end-clients, it shall identify the negative target market on a theoretical basis which may or may not include you as per the information provided during the on-boarding stage and thereafter based on the legal framework and the account maintenance policies of the Company.
